

Product Owner

A product owner is a decision maker. Fundamentally, the role exists to help represent the needs of both the business stakeholders and the users within a complex environment.

They broker the needs of those two sets of people condensing their requests for features and enhancements in to a single prioritised list of tasks for the development team to turn in to working product.

Involved in

Planning

Daily scrum (optional)

Refinement

Review

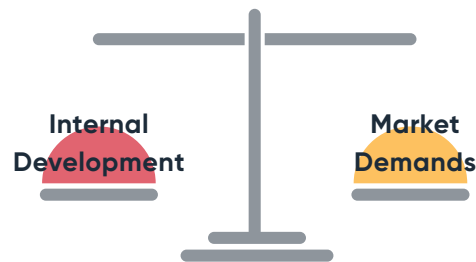

Retrospective

Role Responsibilities

- A single person
- Owns the product backlog
- Clearly expresses PBIs
- Optimises the value of work
- Makes the backlog visible
- Ensures development team understands the backlog

Balancing Act

"Is it viable?"

"What's the right thing?"

Typical Day

